

RICARDO DUMONT

Ricardo trained as a landscape architect and architect. His extensive experience includes award-winning frameworks, master plans, urban design projects, and built work for over 75 institutions, including Bates College, Brown University, Fordham University, Georgetown University, Harvard University, Johns Hopkins University, Mayo Clinic, Northwestern University, The Ohio State University, Purdue University, University of Florida, University of Virginia, and Vanderbilt University. His work has been recognized with planning and design awards from the American Institute of Architects, American Society of Landscape Architects, and Society for College and University Planning.

His public and private urban development work includes planning, urban design, and construction for mixed-use and residential projects like the East Baltimore District Plan with Forest City and Technology Square @ MIT. Projects range in scale from five to three thousand acres and have received three national "project of the year" awards from the private development community and National Association of Home Builders.

Ricardo is the co-author of Mission and Place: Strengthening Learning and Community through Campus Design, published by Praeger Press.
